

Hi John

I should've contacted you earlier but I thought it may have been a little thin/hopeful. On June 12th I was heading home down xxxxx and I saw an animal that resembled a hare but much bigger?? It was the same colour as described last time from the 3rd party bike rider near the XXXXXXXXXX and it was hopping. It was a fleeting sight and I went back and it had disappeared.

The only reason I'm letting you know is the setting. I stopped and had a look today. What I saw came out of a valley/creek from XXXXXXXX and looked to be heading into the park. The park entry (where this occurred) is the head of a valley that connects with XXXXXXXX. At the fence there is a low, forced entrance that is quite large (enough for a medium dog). I remember speaking to someone at the Hotel who swore he saw a tiger in Brownhill Creek (a 30 yr old conversation now). Anyway, the Google Maps coordinates are; xxxxxxxxxxxxxx

I am doing the rounds regularly and have bought a thermo monocular (only worthwhile to uncover a hidden animal you've almost stepped on I'm afraid). I saw some dudes the other night near xxxxxxx and thought it may have been your team? I was on my bike at the time (around 9.30pm) and caught some eye shine but couldn't track it. It followed the creek east at the xxxxxxxx park. Also, my son and I wandered upon a fresh scat in the same vicinity a few nights earlier. I couldn't sample it but took a photo (attached). Plenty of foxes around so wasn't too excited and not usually one to send photos of poo to strangers!

Good luck with your search mate.

Cheers
